Chautala back in jail today, HC says no more bargaining

KAILASH SATYARTHI

- It took a Nobel for India to sit up and take note of Kailash Satyarthi but the unassuming 60-year-old has been working relentlessly for child rights for more than 30 years
- His Bachpan Bachao Andolan, at the forefront of the drive against child labour and trafficking, has helped thousands of children forced into slavery in rug-making units, mica mines gain freedom
- The youngest of four children of constable Ramprasad Sharma and Chironjibai, Satyarthi's fight started when at 5 he saw a boy his age cleaning shoes outside his school in hometown Vidisha
- An electrical engineer by training, Satyarthi enjoys music, likes to spend time in the kitchen — even cooks for rescued children
- His wife is a partner in his fight for a better life for children. His son, an SC lawyer, extends legal help and his daughter is a student

HONOUR Bachpan Bachao Andolan founder Satyarthi shares prize with Pak teen Malala as soldiers face off on border

NEW DELHI: Child rights activists Kailash Satyarthi of India and Malala Yousafzai of Pakistan won the Nobel Peace Prize on Friday, a rare sharing of an honour between the nuclear-armed nations locked in their worst border conflict in a decade.

Little known in his own country, Satyarthi has been heading a more than three-decade-long campaign for child rights, pushing for their education and fighting against child trafficking and bonded labour.

Yousafzai, aged 17, is a school-girl and education campaigner who was shot in the head by the Taliban two years ago for advocating girls' right to education. "The Nobel Committee regards it as an important point for a Hindu and a Muslim, an Indian and a Pakistani, to join in a common struggle for education and against extremism," said Thorbjørn Jagland, the head of the Norwegian Nobel Committee.

The Nobel jury said the prize was going to the two for their struggle against the suppression of children and young people and for the right of all children to education.

Satyarthi dedicated the Nobel Peace Prize to children in slavery, pledging to join hands with fellow laureate Yousafzai.

MALALA YOUSAFZAI

- I Am Malala: The Girl Who Stood Up For Education And Was Shot By The Taliban — the title of her memoir succinctly describes the 17-year-old's life
- Born in Mingora in Pakistan's Swat Valley, the youngest Nobel winner was shot in the head in her school bus in 2012
- It was punishment for her campaign — from the age of 11 — for the right for girls to go to school
- "The bravest girl in the world" made a remarkable recovery — UK doctors repaired her shattered skull with a titanium plate — but Taliban threat has kept her away from Pakistan
- Lives in England with her family. Was in school when the Nobel was announced
- Her fans includes Angelina Jolie. But, she is a fan of Justin Bieber, Twilight novels and Ugly Betty. The teen in her wishes she was taller

NEW DELHI: The Delhi high court Friday cut short INLD leader Om Prakash Chautala's campaign for the Haryana election and ordered him back to the high-security Tihar jail, where he is serving a 10-year term in a teacher recruitment scandal.

The court asked the former Haryana chief minister to surrender by Saturday and was critical of him for violating bail conditions — granted on plea of ill-health — by campaigning extensively for the October 15 election.

translate into sympathy votes for the INLD that has considerable influence over Jat voters, expected to influence the outcome in at least 25 of the 90 assembly seats. In fact, the INLD accused the BJP of misusing the CBI to keep Chautala away from people.

His battery of lawyers, led by Ram Jethmalani, tried to convince the court to allow the 79-year-old to stay out of jail till Monday. But the court refused relief. "Let him surrender tomorrow. Let's not bargain over this," it said.

But, Chautala in jail may also

MUMBAI: The Bombay high court on Friday ruled that Vodafone would not have to pay income tax of ₹3,200 crore on shares it had issued to its UK-based parent. Tax experts and industrialists said the verdict would send positive signals to foreign investors and improve the business climate in India.

This order is not related to another ₹20,000-crore dispute that Vodafone has with the government over the retrospective levy of income tax on its purchase of Hutchison Essar

BOMBAY HIGH COURT SAYS TELECOM MAJOR DOESN'T NEED TO PAY ₹3,200CR DEMANDED BY I-T DEPT IN A TRANSFER PRICING CASE

Telecom Services in 2007. Friday's case relates to the addition of ₹3,200 crore to the tax liability of Vodafone India Services Pvt Ltd for 2009-10. The I-T department had contended that Vodafone India had undervalued shares it had issued to Vodafone plc and that the difference between the actual value of the shares and what Vodafone plc paid its Indian subsidiary was a disguised loan and, hence, liable to be taxed under transfer pricing provisions. Vodafone disputed this contention and went to court.

Transfer pricing is the price at which a parent company buys or sells goods from or to its subsidiary. The law says this price has to be the same as that charged from outsiders. Disputes arise when the pricing is opaque or the exact price of the goods transacted is unclear.

Guj court scraps Snoopgate probe

AHMEDABAD: The Gujarat high court Friday scrapped an inquiry commission set up to probe the alleged snooping on a woman architect, accepting her father's plea that the police had only provided her security at his behest.

The probe panel was set up in November by the then Narendra Modi government after two news portals released taped conversations allegedly between then home minister Amit Shah and IPS officer GL Singhal about state surveillance on the woman, at the behest of one "sahib".

NEW DELHI/VISAKHAPATNAM/ BHUBANESWAR: Cyclone Hudhud was upgraded to a "very severe cyclonic storm" on Friday as it hurtled towards India's east coast, where it is expected to make landfall near Visakhapatnam in Andhra Pradesh by Sunday noon.

The governments in Andhra and Odisha, which also lies in the storm's path, will start mas-
